

Windows

What must it feel like
to be transparent
seeing everything,
whether
a day heavy with sun or rain as babies sleep inside quiet homes and old ladies sit on porches rocking with needlepoint and bees buzz by
and tickle the glass
looking for my honey
lying beside me
in this bed for the past fifty years.