

Verse-Virtual

An Online Community Journal of Poetry

Create a Revolution

by Diana Raab

Incite change,
look for a patch of difficulty amongst glistening clouds, hunt for an need unmet, or a journey you want to take.

Stretch your arms to the sky's glow, find peace within yourself offer a donut to the homeless, tap into the closet never opened and pull down old journals written before wrinkled foreheads and children expanding like spiders crafting their webs.

Sink your teeth into good books, write the author to share your bliss for their warm words which hold the oldest of bones in your family all gone, as you sit in your senior position the same way you were once the youngest and most boisterous of all.

Teach the world how life circles and how change never really occurs it just begs for a new sunlight.

Let yourself go be the one who they all talk about when you are gone.

Published in Verse-Virtual. March 7, 2025.